Son who battled rare disease remembered at Walk for Heart

HEALTH Christopher Kennaway was diagnosed with heart disease at age five. Ever since then, he had wanted to become a cardiologist and find a cure for Catecholaminergic Polymorphic Ventricular Tachycardia (CPVT), the rare, life-threatening condition that afflicted him.

At 17, he got a pacemaker and defibrillator, but three years ago, the 22-year-old, who was studying science at uOttawa, died in his sleep.

His parents, Jeff and Diana Kennaway, described Christopher as "a nice kid with a funny sense of humour" who loved sports and his family and friends.

"He was hoping once he became a cardiologist to go into research and try and find a cure for his particular disease," said Jeff.

The Kennaways were ambassadors for the 10th annual Walk for Heart.

Yesterday's event raised more than $12,000, said Jan Ditchfield, area co-ordinator of community events for the Heart and Stroke Foundation.

Last year, the foundation put $5.4 million back into the Ottawa area for research, said Ditchfield.

Someday, when Steven James Hough is old enough to hear the story of his birth, his parents, Jessica Maclean and Richard Hough, will have quite the tale to tell him.

But yesterday, the one-day-old was content to sleep, undoubtedly tired from the exciting entrance he made into the world in the front seat of the family's Toyota on the side of River Road Saturday night.

When the stay-at-home mom went into labour on Saturday, the couple phoned the sitter for their other two children, Ian, 4, and Emily, 2. On the way to the hospital, Maclean's water broke. The couple pulled over on the side of River Road near Limebank Road. With no cellphone, Hough flagged down a car to use their phone and called 911.

"The head delivered very quickly," said Maclean. "He checked to make sure the cord wasn't on the neck. The next contraction, the rest of Steven was delivered. He put him on me and I think we wrapped him in my pants."

Because Steven is the couple's third child, there were

The baby weighed in at seven pounds, 11 ounces.

"The 911 dispatcher was very much a calming influence," said Hough, an air combat systems operator with the Canadian Forces.

"The baby came out during the call. I heard the cry," said Stephanie Breau, the dispatcher who took the call. "It was awesome. It's a feel-good call."

"I've been doing this for 22 years and this was my first baby call," said paramedic team leader Lise Laporte. "For an unusual call, this had the best ending possible. It went 100 per cent picture perfect."

Car sharers rev up for second decade

Organization hopes to double fleet size in next 10 years, says president

tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

In its first decade, Vrtucar has grown from four friends sharing one car into a fleet of 70 vehicles driven by over 1,400 people and chief sharing officer Wilson Wood sees no reason why it can't double over the next 10 years.

"The oldest car-share program in North America, in Quebec City, has 180 cars. I don't see any reason why, over time, we can't grow to have the same number," said Wood, who is also president of the organization.

Similar organizations in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver have around 500 cars, said Wood.

The challenge for Ottawa is building focused demand outside the Greenbelt.

While Vrtucar has worked well in high-density areas like downtown Ottawa, Wilson Wood, president and chief sharing officer of Vrtucar, shares the keys to one of the 70 vehicles in the organization's fleet at the 10-year celebration for the car-sharing program in Ottawa.

tawa, demand is too spread out in Kanata, Orleans and Barrhaven to make it feasible.

"We need to find 75 users to put a three-car station out in Kanata," said Wood. "We've had lots of people who have contacted us, but they are spread out all over the place."

The organization marked its 10-year anniversary, which was technically on May 12, with a celebration at Minto Park yesterday.

Vrtucar works by having members pay a monthly fee to have access to any car in the fleet. Cars can be booked on the Vrtucar website.

Wood said vehicles are usually booked for three to four hours. Members use cars an average of four times per month.

Instead of keys, members are given a fob that unlocks all the cars.

The organization pays for gas, insurance, maintenance and repair of cars, but members pay for the hours and the kilometres they use.

According to surveys conducted among users in car-sharing organizations, each shared car removes 10 private cars from city streets. Studies have also shown that people who car share reduce their CO<sub>2</sub> output by as much as 1.2 tonnes per year.

Exhibit shows harsh reality facing refugees

Fiona Turpie, an anesthesiologist with Doctors Without Borders, talks about what it's like to be a refugee at the exhibit in Confederation Park yesterday.

CAMPAIGN Imagine having only a few minutes to gather your belongings before fleeing your home forever.

Next, Jodi Pipes wants you to think about where you're going to get water, food and medical care.

For the thousands of people who came through the Doctors Without Borders exhibit, A Refugee Camp in the Heart of the City, in Confederation Park over the last few days, it was an eye-opening look into what it's like to be a refugee.

But, as Pipes has seen firsthand, it's reality for the world's 42 million refugees and internally displaced people.

Pipes, an outreach nurse with Doctors Without Borders, spent six months in southern Sudan in 2007, providing primary health

"It's an ongoing, chronic emergency," said Pipes of the situation in Sudan. Issues there include malaria, HIV and tuberculosis.

The exhibit, said Pipes, is an awareness-raising campaign that will also be travelling to Montreal, then Toronto and Waterloo, to teach visitors about the challenges refugees face through stations focusing on food, shelter, medical care, water supply, health clinics, nutrition and vaccinations.

"It gives the public the chance to experience what it might be like to be a refugee," said Pipes. "It's very important for people to know and just to be aware. Forty-two million people — that's more than the population of Canada — had to flee their homes. They basically lose everything. This is a good opportunity for people to see the reality of this."

Doctors Without Borders is independently funded, said Pipes. "It's basically through the generosity of people that we're able to work in the countries that we do."

Woman sues Rogers for exposing affair

Claims invasion of privacy, breach of contract

A Toronto woman says the billing practices of Rogers Wireless Inc. led to her husband discovering her extramarital affair.

Now the woman, whose husband walked out, is suing the communications giant for $600,000 for alleged invasion of privacy and breach of contract, the results of which she says have ruined her life.

In 2007, Gabriella Nagy had a cellphone account with Rogers, which sent the monthly bill to her home address in her maiden name. Her husband was the account holder for the family's cable TV service at the same address. Around June 4, 2007, he called Rogers to add Internet and home phone.

The following month, Rogers mailed a "global" invoice for all of its services to the matrimonial home that included an itemized bill for Nagy's cellular service, according to the statement of claim filed in Ontario Superior

Statements

According to the statement of claim, which has not been proved in court, "The husband used the previously private and confidential information that the defendant unilaterally disclosed to the husband to inquire about the people that the plaintiff was telephoning and the nature of such calls." The statement alleges Rogers "unilaterally terminated its cellular contract with the Court of Justice.

When Nagy's husband opened the Rogers invoice, he saw several hour-long phone calls to a single phone number.

"Nobody does business this way and he's not stupid," says Nagy, who is in her 30s. He called the number, spoke to the "third party" who confirmed the affair, which had lasted only a few

In a statement of defence, Rogers denies it terminated the contract and says the company "cannot be held responsible for the condition of the marriage, for the plaintiff's affair and consequential marriage breakup, nor the effects the breakup has had on her."

"My husband didn't tell me that's how he found out, he just left."

Consider each other

InTransit

Steve Collins

A fter media reports last week of a simple OC Transpo fare dispute escalating and landing a rider in provincial offences court, it can be easy to forget how smoothly our buses run most of the time, thanks in no small part to simple courtesy.

Consideration can be hard to come by. In Toronto, the TTC last year stopped trying to persuade riders to observe basic etiquette, such as yielding priority seating to those in need for example, and started legislating good behaviour, cracking down with fines of $195 and $345, plus victim surcharges.

In famously rude New York, artist Jason Shlowitz has taken extraordinary measures to teach fellow riders some manners, designing his own posters railing against subway preachers, messy eaters and other from uncommon on public transit boors, and mounting them on MTC property.

"These small acts of civility are also far from uncommon on OC Transpo buses."

Sample admonishment: "Your music may be amazingly enjoyable to you, but remember to keep the volume at a level that only you can hear. Other passengers do not want to hear your favourite songs (The same goes for phones and portable gaming devices). Also, please don't sing/rap along with it. Please."

Fed-up New York transit riders can also take photos of each other's transgressions, from taking up extra seats to public nudity, and submitting them to the bluntly named Subwaydouchery.com, a website created by stand-up comedian Tom Sibley.

Taking a considerably more measured tone towards instructing the public is our homegrown OC Transpo Etiquette, a series of YouTube videos by a self-described team of "three ordinary teenagers that have nothing better to do."

The clips, the longest of which is 22 seconds, get straight to the point on several points of basic courtesy: Move back and make room; watch the volume of your conversation; don't take up an extra seat with your backpack.

It's all pretty elementary stuff, but it's not hard to spot violations on most any bus route. The video makers have no connection to OC Transpo, but most drivers wouldn't find much to dispute in their productions.

Another hint: Warm and fuzzy it isn't, but as a general rule, your fellow passengers mostly just want to be left alone. Public transit is full of the public, and much like on an elevator, bus passengers spend much of the trip ignoring each other.

Still, the best co-riders keep an eye out for an opportunity to help get a stroller onboard or point out when someone is about to disembark without their umbrella. These small acts of civility are also far from uncommon on OC Transpo buses.

They happen every day and they can make all the difference.

Pesticides in foods may contribute to ADD: Study

A new analysis of U.S. health data links children's attention-deficit disorder with exposure to common pesticides used on fruits and vegetables.

While the study couldn't prove that pesticides used in agriculture contribute to childhood learning problems, experts said the research is persuasive.

"I would take it quite seriously," said Virginia Rauh of Columbia University, who has studied prenatal exposure to pesticides and wasn't involved in the new study. More research will be needed to confirm the tie, she said.

Children may be especially prone to the health risks of pesticides because they're still growing and they may consume more pesticide residue than adults relative to their body weight.

In the body, pesticides break down into compounds that can be measured in urine. Almost universally, the study found detectable levels: The compounds turned up in the urine of 94 per cent of the children.

The kids with higher levels had increased chances of having ADHD, attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder, a common problem that causes students to have trouble in school. The findings were published today in Pediatrics.

Canadians want Jean to remain GG: Poll

Canadians still like having Michaëlle Jean as their de facto head of state, a new poll suggests.

With Stephen Harper preparing to replace the Haiti-born, fluently bilingual Jean as Governor General, almost half of Canadians asked say they would prefer it if the prime minister reappointed her to another five-year term.

The latest opinion sampling from Harris Decima for The Canadian Press finds that 58 per cent of respondents believe Jean has done either an excellent or good job as Governor General. Only five per cent think she has performed poorly.

Similarly, 47 per cent believe Harper should appoint her to another term, as opposed to 36 per cent who believe he should find someone new.

The results have not changed much from the last time Harris Decima asked the question in April, indicating that opinions about Jean are fairly entrenched.

Pollster Doug Anderson said Canadians likely don't spend a lot of time thinking about the performance of the viceregal, but what they know about Jean they have generally liked.

Still, he said it would be a mistake to say Canadians are clamouring for her reappointment.

"I don't think people have a very high expectation for that role," he said. "But for all the things that people know that she did, they feel she was probably doing her best and being a good person in that role."

The survey of 1,000 was conducted between May 6 and 9 and is considered accurate plus or minus 3.1 percentage points, 19 times out of 20.

The extension is

sue has become somewhat a controversial topic since Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff revealed that Harper had asked his opinion on the matter and he advised him to keep her on.

Canadians are not so sure making the advice public was such a wise move on the part of the Liberal leader — 39 per cent said it was appropriate and 43 per cent said it wasn't.

Anderson found that how Canadians split on this question largely depended on whether they support Jean's reappointment, and whether they were Conservative or Liberal backers.

Jean's term officially ends on Sept. 27, but there is speculation the prime minister wants to install a new viceregal in time for the Queen's visit to Canada in July.

As the technology becomes more available the price is dropping.

Solar made simple

Price of panels dropping as use becomes common

BEN KNIGHT
For Metro Canada

Electricity bills are rising. Power use is an eternal issue. Maybe you're curious about solar power, but think converting your house is too big — and too expensive — a job.

Not so, says Michael Boxwell, author of The Solar Electricity Handbook.

"The best way is to start small, and build up," Boxwell says. "I've got a house that gets very little direct sunlight. So putting a solar panel system in, that costs tens of thousands of dollars, would be crazy. But putting in enough solar power just to run the lighting in the house: that's easy. Get started with something like that. And if you like it, you can put more panels in and power more things."

The actual cost can be surprisingly low. "I spent about $150-$200, and I've got a basic system. I'm doing a little bit to reduce my carbon footprint, and in case there's a power failure, I've still got lights on."

Not only will every solar panel reduce your energy bill and footprint, Boxwell says the very act of generating your own power greatly increases your green awareness, as well.

"When you generate your own power, you're much more aware of what you're using. You become aware that your television and your computer are taking power if they are left on. You start becoming a lot more energy-conscious if you've got a couple of solar panels on the roof."

Start up costs for a basic solar system are as little as $150.

And if you want to go entirely solar — get your house off the electrical grid completely — it's not as difficult as you think.

"It's not a big job," Boxwell says, reassuringly. "If you're comfortable with do-it-yourself and electrics, you could probably do it in two or three days. But you do need a house where you've got a clear view of the sun year-round. You need a south-facing roof or other surface where you can put a large number of panels."

Perhaps the best news? The price of solar technology is plummeting.

"The glass they use for the solar panels is the same glass they use for flat-screen TVs. Because those have become widespread in the past few years, the cost of actually manufacturing this glass comes right down. They're even now able to make solar panels by printing silicon onto sheets of plastic. It's going to be so cheap you'll have solar panels on the back of cell phones, so they self-charge."

Rafael Nadal won a record 18th Masters title by beating Roger Federer 6-4, 7-6 (5) in the Madrid final yesterday. ### Canada falls to Sweden at worlds

HOCKEY Canada needs to find some urgency at the IIHF World Hockey Championship.

The team saw another tepid start turn into a 3-1 loss to Sweden yesterday, leaving open the possibility that they'll see the Russians as soon as the quarter-finals.

The Canadian players offered a number of different explanations for a flat performance and none of them were particularly flattering — lack of preparation, not enough emotion, no accountability.

Canada's final round-robin game is tomorrow against the Czech Republic. A loss in that one would likely set up a quarter-final date with two-time defending champion Russia, which has won 23 straight games at this event.

Family medicine gains ground

A third of Canadian medical school graduates have chosen family medicine for their residencies. Of the 2,438 medical students who participated in the 2010 residency match, 1,388 applied for family medicine in the first iteration. These numbers are more encouraging than the match results of 2003, when just 24 per cent of Canadian medical students made family medicine their first residency choice.

Most of our images of what a hypnotist does come from bad TV — but in the right hands, this technique is not about making people “very sleepy” so they can squawk like chickens.

For Edmonton social worker Terri Cooper, it's a powerful but simple technique that helps people change things in their lives.

Cooper, now 43, was always a natural at counselling others. “I was one of those teenagers that everyone brought their problems to.” She studied social work at the Edmonton campus of the University of Alberta.

For more than a decade, she worked with families in crisis. It was difficult work, especially since few wanted her advice. “It's hard to work with people who don't really want to see you.”

Cooper wanted to help people in a more empowering way. While she was flipping through the want ads six years ago, she saw an advertisement for a two-day course on hypnosis.

The basics she learned showed her the technique had a lot of potential — and made her realize she needed to learn more. So Cooper began taking more courses in hypnosis and a psychotherapy technique called neuro-linguistic programming.

Cooper then quit her job and opened a private practice, offering hypnotherapy and social work counselling.

Most clients come to her with a short-term goal of changing a behaviour like quitting smoking, improving body image or increasing their confidence.

Cooper begins with an assessment to find out her client's goals and to make sure they don't need more intensive therapy for a serious mental health issue.

At the first session, Cooper tries to get her patients to talk about what they want. She gives them homework, asking them to put these plans into writing.

Session two involves actual hypnosis. To induce the relaxed but aware state, she varies her technique, depending on the person. Some don't like to close their eyes, so she uses what's called a waking hypnosis. Many find fixed eye induction works best: They stare at something for a long time, listen to

Best Part of the Job: “Empowering people by giving them a tool they can work with.”

Once hypnotized, Cooper incorporates the words her client has given her to suggest a change in behaviour. She often makes CDs of her suggestions so clients can use it later at home. She also sells hypnosis MP3s on her website.

Cooper believes the hypnotic state is not magical or strange. We do it all the time when we concentrate or when we're driving. Since our minds are highly suggestible in this state, it is an important time to suggest to ourselves new ideas.

Diane Peters once hawked magic pens at the Canadian National Exhibition. She's now a writer and part-time journalism instructor.

Social worker Terri Cooper, not pictured here, says the stereotype of hypnotists making people ‘very sleepy’ is off the mark.

Single people, only children a recipe for workplace strife

TOMAS LUNDIN
Metro World News

Sweden, has studied how people get into workplace conflicts depending on relationship status and birth order.

Of the 300 people studied, two groups stood out when it came to conflicts — single people and only children.

“It is like a ladder with youngest children at the bottom and single only children at the top,” Ozolins said. One reason sums it up:

Relationships. If you have siblings, you soon learn that you can't always get the biggest piece of the cake every time.”

He adds that single people appear to be more prone to conflict because they often don't have anyone to discuss problems and thoughts with.

“The behaviour is above all explained by being lonely, and more single people are lonely.”

Companies fear losing top talent as economy recovers

As the recession eases and companies begin to add to strained staffs, employers are also taking action to retain existing top talent at their organizations.

According to a new CareerBuilder survey, nearly one-third (32 per cent) of employers are concerned about losing their high performing workers in the second quarter, while one-third (33 per cent) of workers said it is likely they will start looking for a new job when the economy picks up. As a result, employers are turning to a variety of different retention strategies to hold onto those workers and their valuable intellectual capital.

Increased workloads, longer hours and fewer resources related to the recession may be contributing to higher job dissatisfaction. Looking at key factors that influence job satisfaction and company loyalty, workers reported the following:

- Pay: Nearly one-third (32 per cent) of workers said they are dissatisfied with their pay, up from 29 per cent during the same period last year.

- Work-life balance: Nearly one-quarter (22 per cent) of workers said they are dissatisfied or very dissatisfied with their work-life balance.

- Career Progress: Twenty-seven per cent of workers are dissatisfied with the career advancement opportunities provided by their current employers.

Of workers who have their sights set on making a career move, they shared the attributes they will be primarily looking for in a new employer in addition to competitive pay and benefits. Good career advancement opportunities (60 per cent) and good work culture (57 per cent) topped the list. Others include:

- Less stress (45 per cent)
- Sense of ownership in their position, that they can make a difference (42 per cent)
- Camaraderie, more family-like work environment (34 per cent).

"Many employers were forced to make unpopular, though necessary decisions during the recession in terms of adjustments in headcount, pay and overall strategy," said Jason Ferrara, vice-president of corporate marketing for CareerBuilder. "As the economy improves and resources are reinstated, companies are employing different ways to repair and enhance the employee experience and strengthen morale."

Employers are implementing different measures to help hold onto top talent and reduce turnover. Offering more flexible work arrangements, investing more in training and promising future raises or promotions topped the list.

According to a recent study, some of the reasons workers have been looking for new work include less stress and more camaraderie.

Gulf city saying no to Sex sequel

Troubled relationships are nothing new for Sex and the City story lines. But this one takes it to a different level: a possible snub from the Gulf city that plays the exotic backdrop for the movie sequel.

Less than two weeks before the release of Sex and the City 2, it's unclear whether the film will be shown in oil-rich Abu Dhabi — the scripted setting where Carrie and her chic New York posse swap their Jimmy Choos for sandals and kick some sand at Middle Eastern traditions.

It's already been a rocky rapport. Emirates' officials turned down a request to film on location, forcing the crew to head to Morocco and recreate the Abu Dhabi setting. In 2008, the original Sex and the City film was not shown in the United Arab Emirates, where censors routinely remove scenes such as kissing, nudity and expletives from movies and television shows.

And Shooting Stars, the UAE representatives for distributor Warner Bros., said Emirates officials have still not made a decision about bringing the film to cinemas in the Gulf state after its May 27 release date.

The National Media Council, responsible for oversight of films and other media in the UAE, declined to comment.

The film exposes some of the complexities for Gulf cities trying to compete on the international stage. Abu Dhabi has aggressively marketed itself as an emerging hub for film studios and production companies. But there's a high sensitivity about plots perceived as too racy or politically charged.

The UAE's refusal to participate in the film reflects a desire to "control their brand," said Leila Hudson, graduate director of Near Eastern studies at the University of Arizona.

"To the Emiratis, that 'city' in the (movie) title sounds like it's referring — logically enough — to their Abu Dhabi rather than New York. That's a little too in your face," Hudson said.

Glee cast kicks off tour

School's out, but the Glee kids haven't stopped believin'.

The cast making up the popular Fox show's band of singing teen pariahs launched its four-city tour Saturday in Phoenix, anxious to bring the theatrics of a major network show to a relatively smaller stage.

While the show's battling adults, played by Jane Lynch and Matthew Morrison, were not part of the stage production, their absence was filled by taped messages to the audience. After an opening act by the excellent dance troupe Legion of Extraordinary Dancers, Lynch took to the screens snarling that the night's entertainment was about to make the audience ill.

"You will be barfing," she promised on-screen as backup dancers in Cheerios uniforms passed out airsickness bags.

It was the start of an evening that only a fan would appreciate, or even comprehend. Casual or non-viewers who paid upward of $75 per seat surely wondered why they spent so much to see costumes mostly comprised of colour-coordinated street clothes, or a backdrop of bleachers made to resemble a music classroom. Or perhaps pondered why the set list, which ran the gamut from Top 40s R&B to musical theatre to rock anthems, seemed so wildly disjointed.

The cast of the popular television show Glee perform during a concert to kickoff a national Glee tour Saturday in Phoenix.

The connecting spirit of the show was deeply rooted in fan appreciation, starting with a list of song favourites from the TV show and going all the way to the cast's dash through an ecstatic crowd as Lea Michele, in character as glee club co-captain Rachel Berry, belted out Don't Rain On My Parade.

"This whole thing kind of feels like a big 'Thank you' to the fans because they have made the show such a success so quickly and so early on," Kevin McHale, who plays the wheelchair-bound Artie, told The Associated Press. "So this is like giving back."

But while the cast is happy to give the show's rabid fans, who call themselves Gleeks, what they want, it also served up reminders that actors are behind the characters. When Corey Monteith drums during Mark Salling's Sweet Caroline, Salling announces the talent as Monteith's, instead of that of his character Finn.

It's a confusion revisited throughout, as the cast slips in and out of character. Heather Morris offers a few hilarious observations as ditzy cheerleader Brittany, but they're in sharp contrast to her expert dance moves.

Those impressed by the power in Amber Riley's voice also would be surprised that she sounds much softer, much sweeter in person. Her live performance of Christina Aguilera's Beautiful lacked the strength of her recorded cover, though it eventually showed up in the empowering Bust Your Windows.

Jolie & Depp egos clash

WHO'S THE BIGGER DIVA? Work relations between Angelina Jolie and Johnny Depp reportedly have been souring on the set of their next movie, The Tourist, according to In Touch.

"She's getting fed up with Johnny," a source says. "Their chemistry was supposed to fly off the charts, but in private, they're not getting along. She was disappointed that he didn't get in better shape for the role and that he didn't want to cut his hair."

And while Jolie has reportedly been complaining about Depp's tardiness and appearance, Depp has reportedly been getting fed up with Jolie as well, calling her a "prima donna" and avoiding her. "Johnny retreats to his own trailer until he's called out again," a source says. "He thinks she's really full of herself."

Bieber avoids Miley questions on Ellen

BIEBER ASSURES US HE'S PLAYING THE FIELD Justin Bieber's no one woman guy, but that probably doesn't bother Miley Cyrus.

People.com reports the tween sensation wiggled his way out of answering questions about dating Cyrus during a recent taping of The Ellen DeGeneres Show. "I'm dating around, hanging out with girls but not really dating," Bieber says.

"Like hanging around with Miley Cyrus?" asks Ellen as she shows a picture of the two singers walking side-by-side. A smiling and seemingly blushing Bieber quickly responds, "just like hanging around with people."

Bieber and Cyrus were snapped last week having dinner in West Hollywood, but the 16-year-old tried to convince that other girls are in the picture. "If you look on the Internet you'll see other girls that I hang out with," he says.

Later in the interview, set to air today, DeGeneres lets Bieber talk about what he's becoming best known for besides making teenage girls swoon — his hair.

Bieber says it takes him just minutes to put together his signature look. "Like, five minutes. Like, seriously. People are always like, 'yeah, right.' I get out of the shower I blow dry it and then it's done in like, five minutes," he says.

Looking for balance

CAREER SUCCESS DOESN'T MEAN MARRIAGE SUCCESS

Ryan Reynolds and Scarlett Johansson reportedly can't find a balance between their successful careers, and it could mean their marriage, according to the National Enquirer.

"Nothing is going to change unless Scarlett and Ryan can learn to compromise — and they won't. Scarlett won't cancel anything she has coming up or wants to go to, and neither will Ryan," a source says.

"They're struggling to see eye-to-eye on almost anything. From when to start a family — he's ready, but she isn't — to her smoking and what she sees as his reckless motorcycle riding. What's making matters worse is that their busy careers are keeping them apart, so they get really out of sync. It's gotten so bad that neither of them is hurrying home just to start fighting again."

Law and Miller set to tie the knot

NO NANNIES ARE INVITED TO THE WEDDING! Jude Law and Sienna Miller are reportedly set to marry this summer, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The couple — who rekindled their romance last year after they split in 2006 after Law cheated on Miller with his children's nanny — are keen to tie the knot and are set to be planning a "bohemian-style" wedding in Gloucestershire, UK, later this year.

A source told the Mail on Sunday newspaper: "They don't want to jinx things by talking about it, but they have told their nearest and dearest that they would like to get married in the summer."
